Dates: 23rd & 24th April 2025

The Kautilya Society at National Law University, Tripura, in proud association with the Vidhi Centre for Legal Policy, is organizing a two-day academic workshop centered on two of the most vital components of legal and policy-making discourse Legal Writing and the Delimitation of Constituencies in India. This initiative aims to bring together students, scholars, and experts in law and governance to engage in meaningful dialogue and structured learning.

The workshop will feature sessions that focus on strengthening core legal writing techniques, including structured drafting, logical coherence, and policy communication. It will also include comprehensive insights into the highly relevant and constitutionally significant process of delimitation in the Indian democratic framework, enabling participants to better understand the institutional, legislative, and political aspects of constituency demarcation in the country.

Open to students from law and political science disciplines, this workshop is a rare opportunity to gain access to expert instruction and practical knowledge that bridges classroom learning and real-world policy application. The event will be held at the esteemed Tripura Judicial Academy's auditorium on the 23rd and 24th of April 2025, and we warmly invite participation from academic institutions across the state.

ABOUT THE UNIVERSITY

National Law University, Tripura (NLUT) was established by the Government of Tripura under the Tripura Act No. 3 of 2022. As one of India's youngest national law

Universities, NLUT represents a crucial step toward advancing legal education, academic research, and public policy engagement in the northeastern region of India. The university is committed to nurturing a generation of legal professionals who are not only well-versed in substantive and procedural law but are also mindful of the socio-political realities of their communities and the country at large. With a growing emphasis on interdisciplinary learning, experiential education, and student-led academic initiatives, NLUT is rapidly evolving into a hub of intellectual growth and legal innovation.

ABOUT THE KAUTILYA SOCIETY

The Kautilya Society is a unique initiative developed under the aegis of the Vidhi Centre for Legal Policy, one of India's foremost legal think tanks. These societies are set up within leading law universities across the country to encourage student-led research, policy exploration, and democratic engagement. Functioning as a bridge between academic theory and practical governance, Kautilya Societies aim to shape future leaders in law and public policy through activities such as legal research projects, policy analysis, workshops, and stakeholder engagement. At NLUT, the Kautilya Society is driven by a team of passionate law students and faculty advisors who envision a society that not only critiques the law but actively contributes to reforming it.

ABOUT THE WORKSHOP

This two-day workshop is meticulously designed to focus on two key pillars of legal education and democratic integrity: Legal Writing and Delimitation. The session on Legal Writing will guide students in the nuances of drafting legal arguments, writing policy briefs, preparing research papers, and structuring formal communication within the legal profession. It will also emphasize the importance of clarity, precision, and analytical reasoning in every form of legal documentation.

The session on Delimitation of Constituencies will delve into the historical evolution and constitutional framework of delimitation in India. Participants will explore its impact on political representation, electoral fairness, and governance at various levels. Given recent discussions around the 2026 delimitation freeze and its implications, this topic holds significant relevance for scholars of law, political science, and governance.

ABOUT THE SPEAKERS

The sessions will be conducted by Mr. Anshul Dalmia, Research Fellow, Charkha Team and Ms. Mayuri Gupta, Milon K Banerji Senior Resident Fellow, Charkha Team from the Vidhi Centre for Legal Policy.
